Allianz Thematica

The Fund allows investors to participate in the opportunities arising from structural shifts, without being constrained by sectors, regions, market cap size or any benchmark. These shifts are usually triggered by innovation or regulation, a narrowing supply-demand situation or socio-economic factors.

Consumers and businesses are influenced by megatrends

- We live in a world where investment opportunities are being recast by demographic changes, environmental concerns and technology-driven disruptions. These global changes can create opportunities for investment.
- We can see certain megatrends that are producing major long-term shifts: innovation, demographic change, resource scarcity and urbanisation.

Four megatrends

Automation on the production

side, use of online

services on the demand side.

Urbanisation

More people are crowding into cities. Housing is scarce, adequate supply of public services and waste disposal must be ensured, while innovations enable more efficient operations.

Technological Resource Scarcity
Innovation

Many raw materials are finite or limited in their availability. Alternatives are being developed to ensure supply.

Demographic & Social Change

Different demographic factors depending on the region – aging in the West, young emerging middle class in the East and in Africa.
